ROYAL COLLEGE OF ART

ROLE PROFILE

Post: Senior Tutor (Research) Illustration

School: Communication

Programme: Visual Communication

Grade: 10

FTE: 0.6

Responsible to: Head of Programme

Background

The Royal College of Art is the only entirely postgraduate institution of university status devoted to research and knowledge exchange, teaching and practice in art, design, communication and humanities. Its international reputation for excellence in teaching, practice and research has been recognised for two successive years by the highly regarded QS World Ranking survey, with the College as the world's number one art and design university in both 2015 and 2016. In 2017 – 2018 the College has some 2,100 students registered for MA, MRes, MPhil and PhD degrees and over 400 full and part-time academic, technical and administrative staff.

In a rapidly changing world of technological and behavioural shifts, the School of Communication, with its core disciplines of Animation, Information Experience Design and Visual Communication, has been thrown into the centre of an exciting vortex of new possibilities and challenges. Our response has been multiple, ranging from the introduction of new staff, to establishing greater cross-disciplinary collaboration and shared expertise between our programmes and with other areas of the College.

Purpose of the post

Illustration is one of three pathways within the Visual Communication programme, alongside Graphic Design and Experimental Communication, and explores an expanded approach to the practice of illustration as a discipline. The purpose of this new role will be to provide academic leadership for the Illustration pathway within the Visual Communication programme whilst also contributing to the life and culture of the programme in terms of research and teaching delivery. Working with the Head of Programme, the person appointed to the role will be responsible for coordinating and contributing to high-quality research, supervision, teaching and the academic vision and management of the pathway.

Fundamental to work in communication, is an understanding of the context of work and in how ideas can be framed, transmitted and received by intended audiences. For illustrators, practice is integral to what we do – i.e. being and doing, thinking and making, moving beyond mere enquiry or discussion. Form and medium are flexible and appropriate, and the fabrication of image encourages the exploration of diverse ranges of technique, technology, medium and material. Drawing on methods and methodologies that are relevant to contemporary forms of communication practice and research, illustration encompasses roles of the illustrator in contexts such as: Narrative (authorship, commentary and speculative fiction) as well as Situated (site-specific and site-responsive, interactive and commissioned), amongst others.

The programme has high application rates from outstanding candidates worldwide, and it is expected that the Senior Tutor (Illustration) will be able to attract the highest quality applicants while contributing to planned growth in the programme. Working with the Dean and Head of Programme, the Senior Tutor will also ensure that the pathway is identified for its growth and success in research and knowledge exchange, both in terms of staff successes and research degree supervisory completions, and in securing competitive external funding, within the College's strategic plan commitment of growth in research and research degrees.

The programme is underpinned by a committed staff of active practitioners and researchers and is run by a highly experienced and skilled academic team, supported by visiting tutors of a very high calibre, and an outstanding team of technical experts. The Senior Tutor will ensure effective communications with staff, students and external partners, maintain the pathway's academic standards and quality of teaching and supervision, develop and lead new initiatives to enhance the pathway and forge successful creative and academic links with other pathways and programmes.

The Senior Tutor will be informed about current issues and developments in higher education, and will be up to date with current illustration practice and research nationally and internationally, ensuring that the pathway is informed by changes in visual communication practice, education, and the wider socio-political environment, and that it leads academic innovation in these areas.

The Senior Tutor will also oversee the development of the pathway's research profile in the form of funded research, research degree supervision, the development of research initiatives and projects. The Senior Tutor will maintain an international research profile, initiate, plan, lead and deliver externally funded research and knowledge exchange initiatives, and undertake research degree supervision and examination in one or more of the School's areas of expertise. Finally, alongside colleagues in the programme they will support in organizing a structure of publications, symposia, exhibitions, and other forms of realization and dissemination for the pathway's projects.

Applicants should have an acknowledged international standing in Illustration or related subject area together with significant and relevant teaching experience in Higher Education. A postgraduate qualification and either a PhD in a relevant discipline, experience and/or qualifications in research degree supervision are essential. Enthusiasm and an ability to work collaboratively with a small staff team are also essential.
